Prologue

Las Vegas - 2007

I was quietly sitting at the corner of a roulette table, betting occasionally. But not the normal type of bet you would see at a roulette table. The bet I was making would look as if I was betting the last ten dollars in the whole world, just hoping to hit. This isn't the case either. I have money, and I have chips in front of me. So why only one number? Because I knew what number was coming. It was the number fourteen, clear as day. "How?", you ask? We'll get to that later.

Anyways, the gentleman to the left of me was betting standard. He spread out eighty dollars worth of chips on a wide variety of spots, lines, and corners. He also had a ten dollar bet on black, and a fifteen dollar bet on 1st.12. The man's friend walked up quickly; a drink in his hand, a smile on his face. He wanted to get in on the action before the ball was spun, but he realized all he had was a hundred dollar chip. The action was about to begin, so he looked at the table and without thinking placed his hundred dollar chip on top of my ten dollar stack, which was on the number fourteen.

The ball was spun. The two gentlemen became quiet. The ball descended; bouncing every which way, rolling in and out of various numbers, slowing down to land (quite nicely) on number fourteen. The gentleman to my left, even though he had just lost one hundred five dollars, became unhinged. Screaming and yelling at his friend he asked “How did you know? How did you know? How did you know?” His friend became puzzled. He looked off into space and scratched his head curiously. He wondered why he chose the number fourteen and, still in shock, wondered if he really was three thousand five hundred dollars richer.

With all the commotion, no one really noticed I had made three hundred fifty dollars on that very same roll, or that I had a bunch of chips in front of me and still only bet one number. My lips curled into a faint smile as I announced to the dealer that I was cashing out.

In this book I will be sharing some of my stories about my roulette experiences; what I am doing, how it is done, and where I learned the knowledge and techniques that helped me achieve this. This is not a magic trick. It is the real deal. The videos that you see on my website are all real. I do actually know the number first, spin the ball on a normal roulette wheel, and hit the number. Can anyone do this? Yes, the man who won three thousand five hundred dollars off number fourteen did it. He was just unaware of what happened. Anyone can do this, even you.

Chapter One

Stay Calm

I will be referring to this chapter the entire book. In order to know the future you must be calm. In order to have success in the casino and win money by knowing the future, you must remain calm. Why is this? Simply put, if you let your emotions get the best of you, you will not do this correctly and you will choose the wrong future. I repeat, you will choose the wrong future. It is vital that you remain calm, cool, and collected.

First of all, I would like to talk about roulette as “The Game.” The wheel is basically a random number generator. The numbers zero, double zero, and one through thirty-six are mixed up and spread out on a wheel. The wheel is spun one direction and the ball is thrust the other direction. It bounces, spins, and rolls around until it finds a home in one of these numbered slots. (See diagram A)

The field is where you bet money. It is usually on green felt with a grid pattern that has zero, and double zero on the top (European roulette only has zero on the top.) The grid then continues with one through thirty-six in order. (See diagram B) I am not going to talk about out of field play (red-black, odd-even, or 1st-12 etc) because knowing and hitting the exact number is what this book is about.

Now, as you can see in diagram B, the numbers on the field are all in order. If you are playing at the casino, you bet money on number five and it lands in number six. The dealer may say “Oh, you were so close.” If they say this he or she either doesn't know what they are talking about, or they are flat out lying to you.

If you notice in the diagram of the wheel, number six and number five are on completely opposite sides of the wheel. The numbers on the wheel are mixed, and the misconception is that the numbers on the wheel are in order just like in the field.

So, for example, if you bet number eight and the ball landed in number twelve or nineteen, you would be really close because twelve and nineteen are right next to number eight on the wheel.

The other misconception is the size of the ball. The casino has different sizes of white balls that they use in roulette. This is a tool that's sole purpose is to distract you. The size of the ball does not matter. I repeat, it does not matter! They use this to make the players feel they are luckier with a certain size. The only thing that matters is that you are calm and in control of your future.

The other major misconception is that you have to bet every single roll. If you have chips on the table and you don't want to bet that roll, you don't have too. Remember, it's your money. Only bet when you are sure. If you have to bet every roll, and you are spreading your money out everywhere, you're gambling. You will lose your money. Every time.

The last misconception that I will mention here is what happens when you win consistently at roulette. Does the casino send big guys named Louie the Knife and No-Nose Freddy to kill you and bury you in some desert hole? No, that would be really bad business. There are plenty of people out there willing to gamble their money away. Misconceptions and fears that people hold in their minds keep them from doing the miraculous. It keeps them from seeing the future.

One of the most prominent things I hear when I show people that I can see the future of roulette numbers is “Aren’t you afraid of how the casinos might react to this?” This is a fear brought upon by urban legend, and Hollywood. Believe me, the casino you go to will use this against you. They’re not going to kill you, they just play upon your fear.

In order to know the future correctly, you must disregard all of these misconceptions. You can shed fear and believe in yourself. This is vitally important. Stay calm.

Chapter Two

Your Already Existing Ability

What ability? Where is it? I can't see it!

You are about to take a test. All it requires is your memory and a simple question.

The question is, "In your entire life, have you ever known or witnessed someone knowing something that hasn't happened yet?" I'm not talking about a magician. I'm talking about you or someone close to you. If you really search your memory I'm sure you'll find such an occasion. It's probably something you barely even remember because you dismissed it as luck or just coincidence. You probably didn't even tell anyone.

Believe me, I know. When I showed my mom that I could see the future. Her first reaction was “That’s great! Do you have a girlfriend yet?” (No disrespect to my mom, she is an incredible woman) We live in a world that doesn’t support this idea, but you have choices. You can stand up in your own life and see the future no one else sees.

More misconceptions.

If you see the future something bad will happen to you or your family. We have Hollywood to thank for that.

If you know the future you are a witch or wizard. You’re damned to hell and you should be put to death immediately. We have the church to thank for that.

We can also thank New Age groups for destroying views on future sight by their use of crystals and old tea. Gimme’ a break, it’s old tea.

Last, and maybe least, we have the magicians, mentalists, etc, whose acts have become quite good, but acts nonetheless. This creates skepticism about anyone doing anything miraculous or remarkable. So if you really can see the future or you can move objects with you mind, nobody believes you. They say they have seen that trick before. So magicians, congratulations to you, for putting a kink in human evolution.

If you can get past all that petty crap you're on your way to freedom. Everyone already has the ability to see the future in their brain!

Your brain is a receiver and can process future thought. That's why, in your whole life, there was at least one time when you knew something would happen that hadn't happened yet. If you haven't had that experience yet, you will, because it's normal, not paranormal. It's natural! It is an innate ability that can be developed into a remarkable skill.

As far as Hollywood, big business, New Age groups, the church especially, and oh yeah, magicians are concerned, I'll be coming out with a new book. Pop-up pictures and huge letters, so it's easier to understand.

Have I had any training with my already existing ability? Yes. I trained at Ramtha's School of Enlightenment. You can find it on the web at "www.ramtha.com." Ramtha's school is not a New Age school, if it were I wouldn't go there. It's a school of the mind. An actual school where you learn how to do the miraculous! (Not Fantasy Island) Think of it this way. Remember the videos you saw on my site? You can learn how to do things like that and greater at Ramtha's school. Bitchin' huh? The school is open to anyone who wants to learn and they have beginning classes you can sign up for. If this turns you on you should check it out.

So back to your already existing ability. Just know that it is in you and it's working all the time.

You just have to learn to listen to a deeper part of yourself. Human beings are amazing in this way. Once they know it can be done, they go for it and they achieve.

Chapter Three

Vacation Time

Wouldn't it be nice to go on vacation to Las Vegas and pay for the trip while your there, or to be able to make a few extra dollars on online roulette?

You can see the future online just as well as

off. It's just a random number generator program, if you know a few minutes into the future it's the same thing.

I was in Caesar's Place, Las Vegas, on a weekday about 6pm. I had been walking all day, stopping by the occasional roulette wheel, just seeing what could be seen. When I found myself in a huge sport's betting section of the casino.

Long story short, they had huge comfortable chairs in that section. I wanted to play roulette but I was far too tired to make any attempts at seeing the future correctly. So I curled up in one of the chairs and thought to myself I'll just close my eyes for a minute.

Probably fifteen to twenty minutes later my body shook me awake. I sprung out of the chair and, a little disoriented, I walked over to the first roulette table I could see. I reached in my pocket, grabbed a ten dollar bill, and asked for ten one dollar chips.

I looked at the table and knew number twenty-seven was coming. I put three dollars on number twenty-seven, it hit and I made one hundred five dollars. I looked down at the table again and saw number thirty-six. I put ten dollars on it. They rolled the ball and thirty-six hit. I made three hundred fifty dollars. I announced I would be cashing out and the amazed dealer obliged.

Onlookers that had been playing awhile had curiously stunned looks on their faces as I left the table. I had turned ten dollars into four hundred sixty dollars in a matter of moments, because I knew the future that was coming.

Now whether you believe this or not is irrelevant. It's a true story, and stories like that one are an everyday occurrence in my life. What I'm saying is that this can be an everyday occurrence in your life too. Wouldn't that be cool? (I know I have been saying "I saw the number". I'll get more into that after a few more examples.)

A sunny afternoon, not too hot. I walked into the local casino ready to see the future that is readily available for anyone to view. Think of it this way. The world is like the internet. All the world, all reality in all time is flowing into your computer (Your brain). To view the future, all you need to do is type in the correct address, “www.thenextroulettenumber.com” and you get to see it. I repeat, you get to see it. Moving on. I walked up to the roulette table, bought in and proceeded to scan time. What I am doing is “typing in the address”.

I could see number four coming soon to a future near this roulette wheel. So I placed money on number four. The dealer was fairly new and inexperienced. His first attempt at rolling the ball failed. The ball spun out, rolling across the table and hitting a stack of chips. He yelled out to the casino floor manager “Ball out!” The manager comes over to the table and inspects the ball. He then authorizes a new ball to be put into play. The dealer spins the ball out again, a weak spin that doesn't even make a full revolution around the wheel and thus cries out "No spin!" That means the ball has not made enough revolutions around the wheel to be a legal spin. It has to go around at least three times for it to be a legal spin in the casino.

This went on six more times, each time calling to the floor manager. The people betting at the table were grumbling and groaning. It looked like the casino dealer was very embarrassed and could run out of the casino in shame, but he managed to pull himself together for his ninth attempt at rolling the ball.

The ball makes the full three revolutions bouncing and spinning into number four. I tell the dealer "Thank you, cash me out please." The amazing thing about that was that I saw through all the misdeals and all the emotion at the table because I "typed in the right address."
Understand?

In another occasion a friend of mine was with me. I told her I saw number eight, and she didn't even hesitate as she put money down on number eight. She had already seen me see the future before. But before the ball was spun, the number changed and I saw it would be number seven. I told her and she quickly reached down to move her chips to number seven, but she did not move all of them. Like I said, she had seen me see the future before so she still believed in number eight. The ball was spun and it rolled into number seven.

She then said to me "When you said take your money and put it on seven I knew it was gonna be seven but I thought 'What if it's number eight?'" Now, she made money, but she could have made more if she trusted herself more in that moment.

Everyone can know the future. Everyone. You just need to know it's possible. She knew number seven was correct. There is another part to who you are. It's the part that keeps your heart beating at night, that part of you that just knows. It knows the future, and it is always correct.

There have been moments at the casino when four of my friends are betting with me, and two more come in that know me and what I do. They're always kind enough to conceal who I am. So when I say casually "Number eight is coming", everyone reaches for chips. The entire field is empty except for number eight. It has a stack of chips on it that look like the Leaning Tower of Pisa. The ball spins. Everyone watches as it bounces back and forth and lands ever so nicely in number eight. The table goes wild. The pit boss, a little stunned, says "Wow, unbelievable...pay 'em!" It takes fifteen minutes to pay everyone out. What a fine afternoon.

Learn to listen to your inner voice. The future can be seen even on vacation.

Chapter Four

What is seen?

I am not a writer, as I'm sure you can tell. I see the future and I'm telling you true accounts of my life without exaggerated details. That's why this book is short, to the point, and not filled with pointless pages of dribble. The future can be seen, it's not fiction, it's fact. Rewatch the videos. This book is real life. The year is 2007. The month is October.

The first time I went to the casino with my newly formed ability I simply observed at the roulette table and didn't play. A really cool thing happened. Keep an open mind. I looked with my eyes open at the roulette table. A shadow started to appear on the green felt. A one and a seven, clear as day. I knew number seventeen was coming. A man playing had money on number seventeen. They rolled it...seventeen. I saw the number as if I read it in a book, it was that clear.

The future casts a shadow. It's all around you, everywhere, all the time. All you have to do is remain open, calm, and clear enough to see it, and then, you have to act on it.

Believe me I know you can become so tranced out on the shadow you forget to act on the future that is coming. Then it passes you by and you say "I knew it!" and you ask yourself "Why didn't I do anything?" Because you were still looking at it's future, and didn't pull back in time to act.

Lets talk about that for a minute. How many times have you said "I knew it!" after something happened? How did you know it, and why? Your brain picks up and processes future thought instantaneously and just for that moment you were tuned in. You were stunned. You were probably calm in the moment with a feeling of contentment and clarity about you, not feeling distracted in any way. Then when the time was right you picked up on the information. A voice in your head told you something. Then you just passed it off as a random thought in your head. You then went back to whatever you were doing. Then suddenly, what you had just thought happened, and you said “I knew it!” Seeing the future is that simple. Why does the human brain process future thought? The answer is simple. Evolution.

In our society you tend to hear the phrase “You never know.” I hear people say that all the time. It’s become a common way to think. Well, as one who can see the future, and is one hundred percent certain that anyone can know and see the future, “You never know” is the most ignorant thing you could ever say. Basically your saying to an evolving person “Hello, I’m stupid.” Because, in truth, your brain always knows. Even if you don’t.

Doesn't this make sense? Aren't you glad seeing the future is so simple? That you don't have to sit around breathing incense while chanting? That you don't have to sit and watch which way a pendulum is swinging, or if your dowsing rod is moving. What a relief. I'm glad evolution in this universe isn't that lame. You're already equipped to see the future, you don't need a pendulum or any external devices. You just need to stay calm and be in the moment. Allow yourself to see and know the future. Anytime, anyplace, and anywhere.

So back to what is seen. Most commonly, when you first start out with this, there is a sense, like a flash, a knowing of what number will be. That happens very quickly in your mind. What you need to do is start knowing the difference between this flash (actual knowingness) and thinking, which is just another word for guessing. If you think or guess you will always miss. Always. You have to know the subtle but distinguishable difference between the two. It takes practice. You have to experience the difference for yourself.

The better you become at this, something amazing and wonderful happens. A shadow of the number will begin to appear where you are looking during the time of focus. For me, I look off to the side of the roulette field where there is a blank spot on the felt. It doesn't matter what color the felt is. I say a blank spot because it helps if there is no distraction. I focus on the next roll and allow a number to form. I see it with my eyes open. Not blurred. Just looking. This is a natural effect of knowing the future. When a number forms and it is clear, that's when I put my money on it. This is something that takes practice and patience. If you are the kind of person that would give up on something after two hours of practice because it didn't happen right away, this isn't for you. Do something else, be happy doing it. If you love a challenge, your strong-minded, and you love a hint of mystery and adventure, this is for you. You can achieve this.

What does achieving this mean? Freedom. In one word it means freedom! You would be able to make money whenever you want and as much or as little as you want. You wouldn't have to be dependent on anyone or anything. You would be your own island. Just imagine, if you can know the future of any roulette number what's to stop you from transferring that ability to anything else in your life. The future of the stock market, sports, gaming, love, whatever you want. It would be up to you. Freedom!

Now these things bring up questions Believe me, I know. I am not the first with this ability. Sometimes people hide the truth in children's stories and fiction books. Look for Henry Sugar and find out about the true master of this art.

What is seen is that human beings must evolve. It's just the way of things. People with abilities may be strange at first, but will become ordinary in the future.

Chapter Five

Getting Started

The first part of getting started is simply that you know it's possible. Seeing the future has already been achieved, maybe not by you, yet. Nevertheless it has been achieved. Think of it this way. Someone has already ridden a bike. It's up to you to watch and learn how that bike is ridden. So that way, you can ride it too. If you think of seeing the future this way, it makes it more down to earth and anyone can do it (not just the special, which is another misconception). "Psychic" is a word and just a word. That word means that they can ride a bike, and you can too, but they really don't want you to know that, because if everyone can know the future, then they're not special anymore. That's what the word psychic means. Take your power back. Never listen to “psychics” again. Never! You are the master of your life!

Ok, I don't appreciate psychics, religion, magicians (Even though I love magic) spiritualists and new age groups. You know why? They leave you out. The only thing they want from you is your attention, because without your attention they have nothing. They don't empower you. They only empower themselves.

The ordinary men and women that make up the world. The people that work everyday. The people that are considered ordinary are powerful. What I'm saying, being an ordinary man myself, is that ordinary people have extraordinary abilities. They are just dormant because people don't know about them. They are innate. That means you were born with it. You have the ability to see the future. No exceptions. That's just the way it is.

How can I be so sure? Because I went from being a lowly construction worker, to being able to see the future at will. I'm not special, I'm average. A little odd, sure, but average. So through experience I have learned we all possess the ability to see the future and more.

I was in the casino just the other night. There was a man at the table betting "standard". Remember, that means a lot of money all over the table. The ball kept landing in numbers he didn't have money on. I looked at the table and a shadow of number nineteen appeared. I put money on nineteen. He had money all over the place. As I watched him bet he grabbed a handful of chips and his hand paused over number nineteen. The pause lasted at least six seconds. Then at the last moment he chose another number instead of nineteen. I watched all of this. Number nineteen hit.

I won, which was great, but I really got to see this man know, then choose a different future for himself. His hand paused over the correct number. His inner voice was trying to communicate with him as it always does. He just wasn't listening. You know what he said after nineteen hit? "I knew it" and with a deep sigh he left the table.

This happens to people all the time. The explanation is simple. Inside, you always know the future. You just have to choose to listen.

So, getting on with getting started. Anyone can know the future of a roulette number. In this part of the book I'll set you up with a starting focus technique.

If you have a practice roulette wheel at home, that's great. If not, there's many to choose from out there, from very cheap to very expensive. It doesn't matter what style wheel you have, and if you don't want to buy a practice wheel you don't have to. I'll set you up with a practice that you can start right now. All it requires is things you most likely have around the house.

If you don't have a wheel you'll need paper, pencil or pen, scissors, and a paper bag. What you need to do is cut out 38 squares of paper the same size and shape. Then number each piece 1-36, 0, and 00. Put all the pieces in the bag and you're ready to go.

Find a comfortable position to sit in. Make sure you have your wheel or bag ready. You need to relax your body and mind, and turn all of your attention onto what number is coming. You're asking the question in your mind. Think of this and only this in your mind. If your mind drifts onto what you had for breakfast, you need to pause and bring your mind back to the question. You will immediately get information as to what the next number will be. Allow yourself to know, to hear your inner voice. There is a difference between this voice and a thinking voice. It's subtle, but it's there.

When you have chosen the number, roll the ball, or shake the bag you made for about twenty seconds. Then reach into the bag and grab a number or see where the ball lands. After seeing the results repeat the same process when you want to do it again. Make sure you return the piece of paper back to the bag before you start your process again.

Attempt to be very patient and open minded while you do this. Remember, this has already been done. I learned how to ride a bike, now you can too. You will have hits and misses. More hits one day than another. This all normal growth. You may practice for an hour and not get anything. It's easy to become frustrated and give up. Don't take the easy path, don't give up. That's very important. I know this can be done, and I know anyone can do it. I'm one hundred percent sure. If you're worried that using a bag full of numbers isn't the same as a real roulette wheel, don't. I started out the very same way. You are just creating a random number generator, and it will translate very easily to a real roulette wheel. If you would like to buy a wheel and get started that way, cool. It's up to you.

Now remember, the information you receive on the number will increase the more you do this. Basically that means the more you practice the better you get. Just like everything else. The information on the number will be more, the voice will be louder, and you will become sure about knowing the future. This is natural evolution. Nothing to be scared of.

Focusing for long periods of time on numbers may also affect your dreams at night, and you might even get a sense of clarity during the day to where you start to see things a little different. Natural evolution. Nothing to be scared of. You're just becoming more aware

Chapter Six

No Foolin'

So, by now, your either saying "This guy is full of shit" or "Cool, can't wait to try this myself"

Either way, the future is out there, constantly growing, constantly changing, and constantly collapsing into the present. Every human brain will keep knowing and recording the future. Every human brain will see the future collapse into reality as a present moment, and it will always try to get you to see it by giving you dreams, impressions and gut feelings. It will continue until you see that the future can be seen, before it happens. That's just the way it is. I am one hundred percent sure.

How can I be so sure? The answer is simply vast experience. I've been seeing the future of numbers for years now. It's quite common to me.

I was walking through the parking lot on my way to the casino when, on the side of the building, a huge shadow formed into the number eight. I walked in, sat down at the roulette table, and looked off to the side of the felt. A shadow of a five appeared. I was just about to bet five when I thought “What about number eight?”, “What did the eight mean on the side of the building?” I bet on number eight, it hit. Then immediately after, I bet number five, it hit too. I had seen not only the future of the first roll, but the second roll too.

Another time, (different casino, same focus) a man walked up to the table, and cashed in one hundred fifty dollars into blue roulette chips. He spread them out in the field, no corners or lines, no red or black, just numbers. I looked at him, and immediately I started receiving information. It looked like a haze or mist surrounding him. I could read that he was not going to hit any of his numbers.

I was sitting at the far end of the table and had green colored roulette chips in front of me. After looking at this guy I knew the ball wasn't going to land in any spot that this man had money on. So I could have, very easily, put money on just the empty spots on the table. It would have been a sure success, but that wasn't the exactness I was looking for. So I focused more. A shadow of the number three appeared.

I look at the table and sure enough, number three is empty. There are only five empty spots to begin with. I take a handful of green chips and place them on the number three. The dealer spins the ball and it hits number three.

The man became a little upset, he was smoking a cigarette and curiously looking at me. He would look from the table, to me, then back to the table. You could see he was trying to work out what just happened in his mind. Calculating the odds. He was probably thinking "I can't believe it, I bet the whole table except for a few spots and it lands where I don't have any money. And who is this guy who bets one spot and wins" He walked away aggravated.

Now, some of you reading this may be asking yourselves "Why didn't you tell that guy what number was going to hit?” Let me ask you a question. Do you think he would have believed me? Do you believe me right now, or do you think that this is just some made up story to fool you? What do you believe?

There is a difference between believing and knowing. Another question. If you were to ride a bike a thousand time successfully, would you say “I believe I can ride a bike.” or would you say “I know I can ride a bike.”

When you know, there is no believing, only knowing. You do that by proving it to yourself. Proving to yourself that you can know the future. Through experience. Through practical application of future thought.

Have I ever told people around me what was going to happen? Yes. I have stated aloud to the dealer what number would hit next. Then it did.

I've had security called on me for hitting too many numbers in a row. They all stand around me when I bet, looking at every move I make, trying to figure it out.

People don't react the way you would think when you tell them the future and then it happens. It makes some people uncomfortable.

I have demonstrated this ability to many people. Some get excited, some can't believe it, and some just have to leave.

Is seeing the future possible? Can anyone do it? Does it change you as a person? Does it take practice? Can you apply it to other things?

The answer, is yes.

I hope you have enjoyed volume one of “How Did You Know?” There is more to come. This is real life, real events. Its not all wrapped up neat and tidy like some two hour motion picture from Hollywood. It’s life, messy and to the point. I hope we have unlocked some of your potential for you, and that you might consider that the future is not so uncertain. You can be greater than you ever would have imagined.

Now I must end this book by saying Spin-Geek is not responsible for you in any way, shape or form. Your financial situation is your own. If you decide to run to the casino and loose your life savings, that's your choice. Remember, this takes practice, and there is good help available for gamblers out of control. Call Gamblers Anonymous. Get better! Be smart. If your going to attempt this, my advice to you is to practice. Develop consistency. When you start doing this at the casino, play with what you can afford, and don't bet until you're sure. It's your money.

Take a deep breath and stay calm.

Thanks for playing
